Link to Culture

A new year ushers in Volume 16 of this handy guide to intelligent radio listening. Statistics are deadly on the air, but we cannot resist indicating that The Masterwork Hour will have presented its 14,000th performance before this issues goes to press*. With a modest but prideful finger we would like to point out, that for years, WNYC and, more recently, WNYC - FM, have acted as the cultural link between this treasury of the world's greatest music and the people of the world's greatest city.

In the past year, public acceptance and the number of loyal listeners who tune regularly to WNYC and WNYC - FM have both soared. This is due to what we like to call the "passion of discovery"; the discovery that consistently adult radio listening is to be found on WNYC and WNYC - FM. Delighted listeners can't help but share this discovery with their friends. It is rare, powerful and the very highest sort of praise.

Lest our emphasis on "adult" listening indicates that we neglect the children, let us hasten to tell you that it just isn't so. Many of you have written complimenting us on our attention to programs for "small fry." We were particularly pleased when the United Parents Association in its recommended week end listings for children's listening (recently re-published in the New York Times) emphasized WNYC's early Saturday and Sunday morning schedules. For four hours on Saturday mornings, both WNYC and WNYC - FM have taken over the job of a "baby-sitter" for some tens of thousands of parents. You might take advantage of this service for yourself and pass the word on to some of your more harassed friends. (See details on back inside cover.)

Another item that we would like to report is that even though the United Nations General Assembly met in Paris, WNYC continued to provide the coverage that New Yorkers have begun to expect. The differences in time between Paris and New York required some slight curtailment in the number of broadcast hours devoted to the United Nations, but WNYC continued to offer more detailed coverage than any other radio station in the United States. When meetings resume in New York sometime in April, your City Station will continue to play its role in the dissemination of information in the cause of world peace.

More and more of you are tuning to the Municipal Broadcasting System's FM Channel. (Programming on WNYC - FM has been extended to 1:00 A.M. daily.) Your FM receiver provides everything that the old style radio offered with the many "plus values" of static-free, high fidelity reception.

May we take this opportunity of sending the best of Season's Greetings to all of you from our entire staff.

SEYMOUR N. SIEGEL
Director of Radio Communications

* Which emphasizes the Masterwork Hour's position as the oldest, regularly scheduled, recorded symphonic program on the air.
